

Priority Response – Emergency Medical Program

Do you use life-support equipment?

Westfield Gas & Electric maintains a list of customers who, for medical reasons, are given priority for service restoration. The list is updated regularly to enable the department to better assist those most in need.

Priority list accounts are identified in department records to highlight the account's status as a medical priority location. You will receive notification (by phone, email, or text) in the event of severe storm watches and warnings with the potential to cause extended outages such as severe thunderstorms, hurricanes, tropical storms, tornados, blizzards, heavy snow, and ice storms, and depending on the severity of your medical need, notice of planned outages.

To be placed on the priority list, individuals who depend on electricity for life-support equipment should contact the department with proper certification from a licensed physician. This certification is required to be updated annually.

Despite our best efforts, electric lines are vulnerable to storms, lightning, and accidents. We strive to restore service efficiently for all department customers, particularly those on the priority list. However, in the event of widespread outages, being on the list is not a guarantee of early service restoration. Our crews must work in an orderly manner when restoring service. If we don't methodically work through the outage, service could be lost again and outages might last even longer.

When at all possible, we give priority to those on the medical priority list. Please remember, people who depend on electrical equipment for a medical necessity should always have alternate plans in place in case the power goes out for an extended amount of time. This may include a back-up power source, extra medical supplies or an alternate location until the outage is over.

Please call Customer Service at 413-572-0100 if you would like us to mail a certification form to you, or visit our website at www.wgeld.org to download the form.
